"Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God and keep His commandments, for this is man's all. For God will bring every work into judgment, including every secret thing whether good or evil." - Ecclesiastes 12:13, 14 "Therefore, whether you eat or drink, or whatever you do, do all to the glory of God." - 1 Corinthians 10:31 What is man's chief purpose? What is the meaning of our existence? The answers to these questions vary greatly depending on who is asked and what worldview they hold. Some believe humanity will one day advance technologically to such an extent that we will colonize other planets and solar systems and find a better future there. Others believe that religion, philosophy, political systems, or influential leaders hold the answer to mankind's problems. Yet these views fail to address the root issue of the human condition: the sinful heart. Scripture makes it clear that man was created in the image of God and for the glory of God. "For of Him and through Him and to Him are all things, to whom be glory forever. Amen" (Romans 11:36). Therefore, our purpose is not ultimately found in earthly achievement, scientific advancement, or human leadership, but in knowing, worshiping, and glorifying the God who created us. Whatever we do, we are to do all to the glory of God (1 Corinthians 10:31). If mankind were to travel to another planet carrying the same fallen nature, the same sins, corruption, pride, and rebellion would follow. A change of location cannot cure a corrupted heart. Only the grace of God through Jesus Christ can transform a sinner and reconcile him to God. The final answer to man's deepest need is not found in escaping this world but in being reconciled to God. When the Lord reigns in our hearts, we discover that true peace, joy, and fulfillment are found in sweet fellowship with Him. This fellowship, which begins now through faith in Christ, will one day be enjoyed perfectly in His presence forever. Praise the Lord!
